1. A small airfield was located north of Workshop No. 82 of the TUSHINO (37°25'E/55°49'N) Aircraft plant, north of a canal. Only fighter aircraft were stationed there.

2. A large airfield was located south of TUSHINO. More than a hundred fighter and ground attack aircraft, in addition to turbo-jet fighters of German make, were stationed there. Parachuting from twin-engine aircraft was observed.

25X1 [redacted] Comment: Both airfields are known. The statement on the presence of turbo-jet fighters of German make at the TUSHINO airfield in 1945/1946 again confirms that the Soviets took up the study of these aircraft types immediately after the war.
